

What's New!

3/2012 Due to the broad influx of concepts in society, a new section has been added. It is called God and science. This part deals with God, science, creation and spiritual issues and analyses how they may work together.

6/2011 Another new section has been added. This is a supplement to the Taxonomy section, but rather than deal with just typical taxonomy, it concerns a more controversial subject (Deity). How do you classify God and what is the actual taxonomic definition of a God? All these questions and more will be analyzed so that a realistic conclusion can be ascertained.

8/2010 A new section has been added to the site. The issues of taxonomy, including theories, ideas and a new perspective (possible taxonomic template), are covered. One of the original sections of this site has been removed. The database section was originally created because the web lacked a comprehensive listing of basic information concerning certain vertebrate groups. That is no longer the case. Much of the information that was in those pages can be found in many other parts of the web. Due to this high level of redundancy and the fact my time to invest in the research for that project is limited; the final determination was to have it removed. It has been replaced with the taxonomy section.

3/2010 The Beginnings pages have been revised. Two new sections have been added with new information and theories (Creation Geology and Faunal Carbonic Graph). In the Creation vs. Evolution section, there has been major revisions as well as a proposed fourth theory of origins.

3/2009 Re-integrated the crocodilian gallery with the other gallery pages.

11/2008 The faunal timeline has been greatly revised. There are many new features included with it, such as; faunal maps, faunal tables, number of animals on the ark, animal radiations from the ark, etc.

5/2007 The entire site has been re-configured into a new format. Beginnings, Timeline and Gallery main pages have been redesigned.
